Who are the stakeholders of the project?

In addition to the direct beneficiaries of the project who are the Mboororo cattle herders and crop farmers, other key stakeholders of the project will include:

- Local representatives of Government Technical Services (MINADER, MINEPIA, MINEE and MINEPDED);
- Regional and local administrative authorities (the Governor of the North West, the Senior Divisional Officers and the Divisional Officers);
- Municipal authorities (Mayors and councilors);
- Traditional Authorities (Ardos and Fons);
- Other NGOs working in the agro-pastoral and natural resource sectors.

How will the project be implemented?

The overall implementation approach of the project will be participatory considering the role of the various stakeholders vis-à-vis the persistent conflicts that characterize access to and management of natural resources in general and agro-pastoral resources in particular. MBOSCUDA and Village Aid UK will make combined efforts to bring on board all necessary stakeholders, especially administrative authorities, local officials of relevant government technical services, local council officials, traditional authorities and above all, the main beneficiaries who are crop farmers and cattle herders. Also, gender-sensitive methods will be used to ensure that men, women persons with disabilities and youth participate in, and benefit from the project in a fair manner.
